

PREPOSITIONS (&ADVERBS) USED IN COMMON EXPRESSIONS --- DEFINITIONS (Group F)

GROUP F rows 11 & 12
	the most current or modern, especially in technology or systems obsolete; no longer fashionable or in common use enter or be in the path of somebody else.
	incidentally; some extra information the person want to pass on to the listener
	“Of course you can.” invite or give someone permission to do something without reservation
	owe money or favours
	that time when somebody is officially working, especially for the police or doctors

GROUP F rows 11 & 12
	the most current or modern, especially in technology or systems obsolete; no longer fashionable or in common use
	enter or be in the path of somebody else.
	incidentally; some extra information the person want to pass on to the listener
	“Of course you can.” invite or give someone permission to do something without reservation
	owe money or favours
	that time when somebody is officially working, especially for the police or doctors

GROUP F rows 11 & 12
	the most current or modern, especially in technology or systems obsolete; no longer fashionable or in common use
	enter or be in the path of somebody else.
	incidentally; some extra information the person want to pass on to the listener
	“Of course you can.” invite or give someone permission to do something without reservation
	owe money or favours
	that time when somebody is officially working, especially for the police or doctors

GROUP F rows 11 & 12
	the most current or modern, especially in technology or systems obsolete; no longer fashionable or in common use
	enter or be in the path of somebody else.
	incidentally; some extra information the person want to pass on to the listener
	“Of course you can.” invite or give someone permission to do something without reservation
	owe money or favours
	that time when somebody is officially working, especially for the police or doctors

GROUP F rows 11 & 12
	the most current or modern, especially in technology or systems obsolete; no longer fashionable or in common use
	enter or be in the path of somebody else.
	incidentally; some extra information the person want to pass on to the listener
	“Of course you can.” invite or give someone permission to do something without reservation
	owe money or favours
	that time when somebody is officially working, especially for the police or doctors